SOURCE C

Working time was lost because of bad organisation of the workers. A brigade would be sent to pour concrete foundations before the digging work was finished. Workers would be sent to a job for which there were no materials or essential tools. During the winter the scaffold was coated with about an inch of ice. It was also very insecure. During the entire winter of 1932–3 the workers got no butter, and almost no sugar or milk. They received only bread and a little grain cereal. In early April welding was impossible because our cables short-circuited and bubonic plague had broken out in three places near Magnitogorsk.

From a book describing conditions in Magnitogorsk, the new showpiece city of the Soviet Union, by an American who volunteered to work there. He worked in Magnitogorsk from 1932 to 1938 and published his book in the USA in 1941.
