PEARSON

Sikhism

Sikh ethics are based upon three fundamental concepts – first, that the principles kirt karo, nam japo and vand cako, work, worship and charity, should dominate one's complete life. Second, that self-reliance (haumai) is the great enemy of God realization and that it manifests itself in the five evils of lust, anger, greed, materialism and pride. Activities which result from any of these vices should be avoided. This is best done by practising the virtues of contentment, patience, the service of others and humility, which is considered to be the lynchpin of them all. Guru Nanak once remarked, 'Sweetness and humility are the essence of all virtues' (AG 470).

The householder basis of ethics

It is as a householder (grihasthi), a member of a family, not as one who has withdrawn from the world either to become a student or a hermit, that a Sikh should explore the meaning of God-realization.

Putting the principles into practice is difficult because the requirement to live like a lotus in a dirty pond, to be in the world but not attached to it, to radiate beauty and remain pure, is hard. It is easier to turn away from the social responsibilities but asceticism and renunciation are rejected.
