Instructions

- Use black ink or ball-point pen.
- Fill in the boxes at the top of this page with your name, centre number and candidate number.
- You must answer three questions on the option for which you have been prepared.
- There are three sections in this question paper. Answer one question from Section A, one question from Section B and one question from Section C.
- Answer the questions in the spaces provided – there may be more space than you need.

Information

- The total mark for this paper is 60.
- The marks for each question are shown in brackets – use this as a guide as to how much time to spend on each question.

Advice

- Read each question carefully before you start to answer it.
- Check your answers if you have time at the end.
SECTION A

Choose EITHER Question 1 OR Question 2 for which you have been prepared.

You must start your answer on page 3.

Option 36.1: Protest, agitation and parliamentary reform in Britain, c1780–1928

Study Source 1 in the Sources Booklet before you answer this question.

1 Assess the value of the source for revealing the nature of the support for the meeting at St Peter's Fields and the role of the forces of law and order in the events at Peterloo.

Explain your answer, using the source, the information given about its origin and your own knowledge about the historical context.

(Total for Question 1 = 20 marks)

Option 36.2: Ireland and the Union, c1774–1923

Study Source 2 in the Sources Booklet before you answer this question.

2 Assess the value of the source for revealing the reasons for Daniel O'Connell's victory in the 1828 County Clare election and the implications of that victory.

Explain your answer, using the source, the information given about its origin and your own knowledge about the historical context.

(Total for Question 2 = 20 marks)
Indicate which question you are answering by marking a cross in the box ☒. If you change your mind, put a line through the box ☒ and then indicate your new question with a cross ☒.

Chosen question number:  Question 1 ☐  Question 2 ☐
SECTION B

Answer ONE question in Section B on the option for which you have been prepared.

You must start your answer to your chosen question on the next page.

Option 36.1: Protest, agitation and parliamentary reform in Britain, c1780–1928

EITHER

3 ‘The principal reason why the Chartists failed to secure the terms of the Charter, in the years 1838–48, was that their campaign was damaged by violence.’

How far do you agree with this statement?

(Total for Question 3 = 20 marks)

OR

4 ‘Militant action did more harm than good in attempting to advance the cause of women’s suffrage in the years 1908–14.’

How far do you agree with this statement?

(Total for Question 4 = 20 marks)

Option 36.2: Ireland and the Union, c1774–1923

EITHER

5 How accurate is it to say that the main reason for the development of industry in Ulster, in the years 1825–55, was the improvements made in the transport system?

(Total for Question 5 = 20 marks)

OR

6 ‘In the years 1845–51, the social and economic effects of depopulation were a disaster for Ireland.’

How far do you agree with this statement?

(Total for Question 6 = 20 marks)
SECTION C

Answer ONE question in Section C on the option for which you have been prepared.

You must start your answer to your chosen question on the next page.

Option 36.1: Protest, agitation and parliamentary reform in Britain, c1780–1928

EITHER

7 How accurate is it to say that changes to the system of representation, in the years 1815–1928, were mainly driven by government fear of revolution?

(Total for Question 7 = 20 marks)

OR

8 ‘The influence of the aristocracy on parliament declined substantially during the years c1780–1911.’

How far do you agree with this statement?

(Total for Question 8 = 20 marks)

Option 36.2: Ireland and the Union, c1774–1923

EITHER

9 How far do you agree that the 1867 Fenian Rising was the key turning point in the development of Irish nationalism in the years c1774–1885?

(Total for Question 9 = 20 marks)

OR

10 ‘Gladstone played a greater role than any other British politician in the development of government policies to deal with the Irish Question in the years c1774–1922.’

How far do you agree with this statement?

(Total for Question 10 = 20 marks)
Do not return this booklet with the question paper.
Sources for use with Section A.

Answer the question in Section A on the option for which you have been prepared.

Option 36.1: Protest, agitation and parliamentary reform in Britain, c1780–1928

Source for use with Question 1.

Source 1: From a report by John Tyas published in The Times newspaper, 19 August 1819. Tyas was a journalist who attended the meeting at St Peter’s Fields on 16 August 1819. He was on the wagon that Henry Hunt used as a platform and was mistakenly arrested. This report was published after his release. The Times was usually critical of the reform movement.

About 11.30 am, the first group of Reformers arrived, carrying banners. Large numbers of Reformers, many carrying flags, from the different towns in the neighbourhood of Manchester, continued to arrive until 1 pm. Many of them were in regular marching order. A club of female Reformers came from Oldham. A group of women from Manchester saw these female Reformers and burst out into an indignant exclamation – ‘Go home to your families, and leave these matters to your husbands who better understand them.’ These women were of the lower order in life. By 1 pm, we estimate that 80,000 people were assembled.

A group of 400 police constables marched into the field at about 12 pm, unsupported by any military body. Not the slightest insult was offered to them.

I saw the Manchester Yeomanry cavalry advancing in a rapid trot. They drew their swords, and brandished them fiercely in the air. Hunt instructed the multitude to give three cheers, to show the military that they were not intimidated by the Yeomanry’s unwelcome presence. Hunt had scarcely spoken before the Manchester Yeomanry cavalry rode into the mob, which gave way before them. Then the Yeomanry advanced to the wagon from where Hunt was speaking. Nothing was thrown at them – not a pistol was fired during this period: all was quiet and orderly.

The Manchester Yeomanry wheeled round the wagons till they came in front of them, the people drawing back in every direction on their approach. The Yeomanry surrounded the wagons to prevent all escape. The officer who commanded the detachment went up to Mr. Hunt, and said, brandishing his sword, ‘Sir, I have a warrant against you, and arrest you as my prisoner.’ As soon as Hunt had jumped from the wagon, a cry was made by the cavalry, ‘Seize their flags.’ They immediately dashed not only at the flags which were in the wagon, but those which were positioned among the crowd, cutting most indiscriminately to the right and left in order to get at them. This set the people running in all directions, and it was not until this act had been committed that anything was hurled at the military. From that moment the Manchester Yeomanry cavalry lost all command of their temper.
Option 36.2: Ireland and the Union, c1774–1923

Source for use with Question 2.

Source 2: From a letter written by William Vesey Fitzgerald to Robert Peel, 5 July 1828. On this day, Vesey Fitzgerald had conceded the County Clare election to Daniel O'Connell. Robert Peel was Home Secretary at this time and a friend of Vesey Fitzgerald.

The election, thank God, is over, and I do feel happy on its being terminated, in spite of the result. I was voted for by all of the gentry and all of the £50 freeholders*. Of others with the vote, I have received the votes of a few tenants only: my own, and not much beyond that. All the great voting interests broke down, and the desertion has been universal. Such a scene we have had. Such a tremendous prospect opens to us. My aim has been from the beginning to preserve my good temper, and to keep down the feelings of my excited friends. The conduct of the Catholic priests has been even more extreme than you might have expected.

The Sheriff declared the numbers tonight. To go on would have been pointless. I have kept on for five days, and it was a hopeless contest from the first. Everything was against me. Indeed I do not understand how I have not been beaten by a greater majority. The Sheriff has made a special Return of the results, and you will say a strange one; but it will force Parliament instantly to look into the result. It states that I was proposed, being a Protestant, as a fit person to represent the County in Parliament and that Mr O'Connell, a Roman Catholic, was also proposed. It states that Mr O'Connell had declared before the Sheriff that he was a Roman Catholic, and intended to continue as a Roman Catholic. It states that a protest was made by the electors against his election. It states only the number of votes for each candidate – and thus it leaves the Return of the results. It does not name who has been elected to Parliament as the MP for County Clare.

I shall see you soon, I trust. I shall be able to get away from here, I hope, on Monday. I must have a day's rest, and one day to settle my accounts. I care not for anything since I have conceded the contest. I feel deeply for the shame brought on the County. The Catholic organisation is so complete and so formidable that no man can contemplate without alarm what is to follow in this wretched country.

---

* £50 freeholders – a qualification for voting; these would have been relatively wealthy voters

 Sheriff – acted as the Returning Officer who reports the results of an election
Acknowledgements

Every effort has been made to contact copyright holders to obtain their permission for the use of copyright material. Pearson Education Ltd. will, if notified, be happy to rectify any errors or omissions and include any such rectifications in future editions.