SUMMER 2019

AS (NEW)
RELIGIOUS STUDIES
UNIT 2 - SECTION A
AN INTRODUCTION TO RELIGION AND ETHICS
2120U20-1

INTRODUCTION

This marking scheme was used by WJEC for the 2019 examination. It was finalised after detailed discussion at examiners' conferences by all the examiners involved in the assessment. The conference was held shortly after the paper was taken so that reference could be made to the full range of candidates' responses, with photocopied scripts forming the basis of discussion. The aim of the conference was to ensure that the marking scheme was interpreted and applied in the same way by all examiners.

It is hoped that this information will be of assistance to centres but it is recognised at the same time that, without the benefit of participation in the examiners' conference, teachers may have different views on certain matters of detail or interpretation.

WJEC regrets that it cannot enter into any discussion or correspondence about this marking scheme.

MARKING INSTRUCTIONS

Positive marking

It should be remembered that candidates are writing under examination conditions and credit should be given for what the candidate writes, rather than adopting the approach of penalising him/her for any omissions. It should be possible for a very good response to achieve full marks and a very poor one to achieve zero marks. Marks should not be deducted for a less than perfect answer if it satisfies the criteria of the mark scheme.

Exemplars in the mark scheme are only meant as helpful guides. Therefore, any other acceptable or suitable answers should be credited even though they are not actually stated in the mark scheme.

Two main phrases are deliberately placed throughout each mark scheme to remind examiners of this philosophy. They are:

- “Candidates could include some of the following, but other relevant points should be credited.”
- “This is not a checklist, please remember to credit any valid alternatives.”

Rules for Marking

1. Differentiation will be achieved on the basis of candidates' response.
2. No mark scheme can ever anticipate or include every possible detail or interpretation; examiners should use their professional judgement to decide whether a candidate's particular response answers the question in relation to the particular assessment objective.
3. Candidates will often express their ideas in language different from that given in any mark scheme or outline. Positive marking therefore, on the part of examiners, will recognise and credit correct statements of ideas, valid points and reasoned arguments irrespective of the language employed.

Banded mark schemes

Banded mark schemes are divided so that each band has a relevant descriptor. The descriptor provides a description of the performance level for that band. Each band contains marks. Examiners should first read and annotate a candidate's answer to pick out the evidence that is being assessed in that question. Once the annotation is complete, the mark scheme can be applied. This is done as a two stage process.

Banded mark schemes stage 1 – deciding on the band

When deciding on a band, the answer should be viewed holistically. Beginning at the lowest band, examiners should look at the candidate's answer and check whether it matches the descriptor for that band. Examiners should look at the descriptor for that band and see if it matches the qualities shown in the candidate's answer. If the descriptor at the lowest band is satisfied, examiners should move up to the next band and repeat this process for each band until the descriptor matches the answer.

If an answer covers different aspects of different bands within the mark scheme, a 'best fit' approach should be adopted to decide on the band and then the candidate's response should be used to decide on the mark within the band. For instance, if a response is mainly in band 2 but with a limited amount of band 3 content, the answer would be placed in band 2, but the mark awarded would be close to the top of band 2 as a result of the band 3 content.

Banded mark schemes stage 2 – deciding on the mark

Once the band has been decided, examiners can then assign a mark. During standardising (at the Examiners' marking conference), detailed advice from the Principal Examiner on the qualities of each mark band will be given. Examiners will then receive examples of answers in each mark band that have been awarded a mark by the Principal Examiner. Examiners should mark the examples and compare their marks with those of the Principal Examiner.

When marking, examiners can use these examples to decide whether a candidate's response is of a superior, inferior or comparable standard to the example. Examiners are reminded of the need to revisit the answer as they apply the mark scheme in order to confirm that the band and the mark allocated is appropriate to the response provided. Indicative content is also provided for banded mark schemes. Indicative content is not exhaustive, and any other valid points must be credited. In order to reach the highest bands of the mark scheme a learner need not cover all of the points mentioned in the indicative content, but must meet the requirements of the highest mark band.

Awarding no marks to a response

Where a response is not creditworthy, that is it contains nothing of any relevance to the question, or where no response has been provided, no marks should be awarded.

GCE RELIGIOUS STUDIES
SUMMER 2019 MARK SCHEME

Unit 2 Section A: An Introduction to Religion and Ethics

To be read in conjunction with the generic level descriptors provided.

1. (a) Examine the primary and secondary precepts in Aquinas' Natural Law.
[AO1 30]

Candidates could include some of the following, but other relevant responses should be credited.

- The Primary Precepts are based on the underpinning premise of 'doing good and avoiding evil'. This is because if God created what is good (the Eternal Laws) then to achieve our telos of developing into the image of God, moral agents need to follow these Primary Precepts i.e. 'Do Good and avoid evil'.
- However, moral agents cannot see all of God's eternal laws. They can see a reflection of them within either Divine Law or through the precepts of Natural Law.

PRIMARY PRECEPTS

- Aquinas firstly reasoned because humanity was created by God into a purposeful universe then humanity must also have been created with a set of God given end purposes - Aquinas called these purposes the five primary precepts.
- The five deontological primary precepts are:
  - Preservation of Life: Preserve your life and those of the innocent.
  - Orderly living in Society: To live together in harmony.
  - Worship God: We all have a duty to worship our creator (God).
  - Education: Seek to understand the nature of God's earth.
  - Reproduction: Of the human species.
- The primary precepts act as a universal and permanent set of deontological rules that humanity must follow if they wish to achieve their telos of developing into the image of God.

SECONDARY PRECEPTS

- Aquinas reasoned from the above Primary Precepts you can create specific deontological ethical rules - known as secondary precepts.
- Any action that breaks a Primary Precept is evil and thus takes a moral agent away from their telos of 'becoming more like God' and any action that supports/upholds a Primary Precept is good and thus helps a moral agent achieve their telos of 'becoming more like God'.
- From the above specific deontological rules can be created (secondary precepts) – candidates are likely to enhance this point by exemplifying their explanations.

This is not a checklist, please remember to credit any valid alternatives.

- (b) ‘Natural Law has more strengths than weaknesses’.
Evaluate this view.

[AO2 30]

Candidates could include some of the following, but other relevant responses should be credited.

- One possible line of argument that Natural Law has more strengths than weaknesses is that Natural Law can be applied the same to all people at all times i.e. it is universal. This is a good strength for Natural Law because everyone will be treated the same regardless of gender, race or culture etc.
- This line of argument could be contested because of the following weakness: Aquinas’ Natural Law assumes that everyone is the same. Therefore, all moral agents have the same purpose in life. However, this is an issue taken up by some philosophers, such as Gareth Moore. He claims people are different, moral agents are affected by their culture and up-bringing. Therefore, it is unjust to judge all people universally when people are clearly different.
- An alternative line of argument that Natural Law has more strengths than weaknesses is that Natural Law provides strong moral guidance. This is particularly needed as we live in a society that is in moral decline, as highlighted by academics like Lord Devlin. Therefore, what society needs to improve morality is decisive and clear deontological moral ethic, like Natural Law, that everyone should follow.
- However, this can be challenged because of the following weakness: society is now secular. Therefore, Natural Law can seem irrelevant because it is based on the idea that God created humanity. This is something that a secular society does not generally believe in anymore. A strength of this argument is that Natural Law is stuck in the past, enforcing centuries old views that are out of touch with 21st century society.
- Another line of argument that Natural Law has more strengths than weaknesses is that Natural Law is all encompassing. Natural Law can be applied to all ethical situations, including modern ethical issues that are not covered in the Bible. This is because Natural Law’s secondary precepts can be created by simply seeing if they break or uphold a primary precept.
- The line of argument can be contested because of the following weakness: scripture is a more reliable approach to Christian ethics than Natural Law’s use of reason. This is because human reason can be used wrongly, as Aquinas highlighted in his ‘apparent good’ theory.

Overall, candidates should engage with the debate and come to a substantiated evaluation regarding the issue raised.

2. (a) Explain Ethical Egoism.

[AO1 30]

Candidates could include some of the following, but other relevant responses should be credited.

- Ethical Egoism is a normative theory (i.e. it directs / guides ethical action). It claims that an action is moral if it is based on the self-interest of the agent. It assumes that it is right for a person to pursue their own self-interests.
- This could be contrasted with altruism in order to make the definition clear.
- Psychological Egoism is non-normative but purely descriptive. It observes that human nature is such that all our actions are motivated by self-interest.
- Ethical Egoism suggests how humans should act; Psychological Egoism observes how humans do in fact act.
- In Ethical Egoism moral decisions should focus on the long-term rather than short-term interests of the agent, which may involve doing actions which appear altruistic but which ultimately benefit the agent. Candidates may offer a range of examples to illustrate this idea.
- Ethical Egoism is not the same as being purely selfish – there is a clear difference between the character trait of selfishness and the ethical theory of Egoism as the right way to act.
- Max Stirner rejects the concept of Ethical Egoism based purely on material gain (as defined by capitalism), as greed is only one part of the ego. An action is moral if it serves the interests of the individual in the broadest sense and does not restrict this to one aspect of the ego.
- Max Stirner rejects the notion that Psychological Egoism presents because he thinks that we are all slaves to some ideology or abstract social construct (spook).
- He sees each individual as unique, and claims that in order to develop one's unique nature one should seek to be free of all spooks.
- Ultimately the individual seeks 'ownness' (eigenheit) and becomes a person free from social constraints. A person can then appreciate their own uniqueness (einzig) and can be truly free to act.
- Stirner argues for a 'union of egoists' in which each would cooperate with others out of mutual self-interest. A moral action would therefore be one in which the individual cooperates freely with others because of their mutual interests.

This is not a checklist, please remember to credit any valid alternatives.

- (b) ‘Following Ethical Egoism inevitably leads to moral evil.’ [AO2 30]
Evaluate this view.

Candidates could include some of the following, but other relevant responses should be credited.

- A line of argument that following Ethical Egoism inevitably leads to moral evil is that Ethical Egoism encourages the pursuit of an individual’s own interests. However, an individual’s pursuit of their own self-interest could lead to other individuals suffering e.g. a particular egoist’s pursuit could be for the selfish accumulation of money. However, there is only a limited amount of money within a society therefore as one individual accumulates money it means other individuals have less. Therefore, Ethical Egoism could create the social injustice of poverty for some.
- This line of argument could be contested because Stirner makes it clear that excessive concentration on material gain would just enslave the moral agent. This is because the agent would just become a slave to capitalism; always trying to improve their bank balance at the sacrifice of developing and satisfying their own unique ego.
- Another line of argument that following Ethical Egoism inevitably leads to moral evil is that Ethical Egoism encourages bigotry. A bigot is a prejudiced person who is intolerant towards different groups of people. Bigots tend to believe their group is superior to other groups of people, therefore they divide people into themselves (and like-minded people) and others (people not like them). Ethical Egoism is a form of bigotry because it divides people e.g. ourselves and everyone else who I can use for my own pleasure.
- This line of argument could be contested because Ethical Egoism is the only method for a moral agent to become who they uniquely are. Stirner would argue the greatest moral evil would occur if the moral agent were to follow a moral framework (such as Natural Law) because they would then be sacrificing their own uniqueness and thus free will.
- Another line of argument that following Ethical Egoism inevitably leads to moral evil is that Ethical Egoism will inevitably lead to the destruction of a community ethos. This is because moral agents will instead concentrate only upon their own self-interests and thus ignore community needs which rely on altruism.
- This line of argument could be contested because Stirner still believes that people should still group together in small communities, which he called Union of Egoists.

Overall, candidates should engage with the debate and come to a substantiated evaluation regarding the issue raised.
