Section A: Analysis of Spoken Language

Read the texts on pages 4 and 5 and then answer the following compulsory question.

The two texts printed on pages 4 and 5 are examples of television interviews.

Text A is from a 2013 interview of Boris Johnson, then Conservative Mayor of London, by the presenter Eddie Mair on British television. Mair is asking Johnson about various accusations made against him in a recent documentary.

Text B is from a 2017 interview on American television in which the President Donald Trump is interviewed in front of an audience of his supporters by the presenter Sean Hannity. They are discussing Trump's proposed changes to the funding of healthcare in America.

1. In your response to the question that follows, you must:
 - draw on your knowledge of the different language levels
 - consider concepts and issues relevant to the study of spoken language
 - explore connections between the transcripts.

Analyse the spoken language of these texts as examples of interviews with politicians. [60]

BJ: well (.) er (.) this this again /jənəu/ (.) these are these are these are big terms for (.) what happened was (.) I can tell you the whole thing [indistinct] are you sure our viewers wouldn't want to hear more // about
- 5 EM: // alright if you don't want to talk about the made-up quote
- BJ: it was it was a a long long and lamentable story=
EM: =OK but you made a quote up=
BJ: rall =well (.) what happened was (.) erm (.) I ascribed events er that were supposed to 10 have taken place before er the death of Piers Gaveston¹ to events that actually took place after the death of Piers Gaveston=
EM: =yes you made something up (.) let me ask you about a barefaced lie
BJ: I mildly sandpapered something somebody had said // and yes
EM: // let me ask you about a
- 15 barefaced lie
BJ: accel it was very embarrassing and I'm very sorry for it
EM: let me ask you about a barefaced // lie when you were in Michael Howard's² team you
BJ: // alright
EM: denied to him you were having an affair (.) it turned out you were and he sacked you 20 for that (.) why did you lie to your party leader?
BJ: well again (.) I mean with great respect on tha:::t I never had any conversation with Michael Howard about that matter and I don't propose=
EM: =you did lie to him (1)
BJ: well /jənəu/ I don't propose to go into all that again=
25 EM: =I don't blame you
BJ: no well why should I (.) I've been I've been through er that /jənəu/ question a lot with the (.) watch the documentary³ (.) why don't we talk about something else?
EM: the programme also includes (.) well this is about your integrity
BJ: OK
- 30 [Text omitted in which EM accuses BJ of encouraging an assault on a journalist]
- EM: what does that say about you Boris Johnson? aren't you in fact making up quotes lying to your party leader wanting to be part of someone being physically assaulted (.) you're a nasty piece of work aren't you?
BJ: well you know Eddie I think I think all three things I would dispute
35 EM: you don't factually dispute them?
BJ: well I do if we had if we had a long time which we don't I could I could explain that all three interpretations you're putting on those things aren't wholly aren't wholly fair

Section B: Language Issues

Answer one question.

In your response to this section, you must:

- apply appropriate methods of language analysis, using associated terminology and coherent expression
- demonstrate understanding of relevant language concepts and issues
- consider contextual factors and language features associated with the construction of meaning
- provide supporting examples.

Either,

2. Read the following extract from Sociolinguistics by Peter Stockwell.

A senior doctor is discussing a patient's condition with a senior nurse, the patient herself and a junior doctor.

Senior doctor talking to senior nurse out of the patient's hearing:

We'll stop Mrs P's A (drug's pharmaceutical name) – it's done bugger all to help her and just made her more vulnerable to infection.

Senior doctor moving to the patient's bedside and addressing her:

Well it is TB – as long as you take the tablets to fight the infection there will be no problem – we are going to stop your breathing tablets as it's just not helping.

Senior doctor moving away from the bedside and talking to the junior doctor:

Unfortunately her emphysema masked the underlying tuberculosis – I've actually seen at PM widespread miliary infection that was not picked up on by either CT scan or PA view on x-ray.

Section C, 'Exploration' (Routledge, 2002)

Using this extract as a starting point, analyse and evaluate the ways in which speakers vary their use of language depending on audience. [60]

Or,

3. Read the following extract from Matthew Saxton's Child Language.

[We should] try to get a sense of the magnitude of the task facing the newborn child. The first thing to note is that the child is battling on several fronts at once. Language has different components, or levels, each of which must be tackled: phonology, vocabulary, morphology and syntax. Or we might reduce our list to just two factors: meaning and sound. The study of child language acquisition could be reduced to working out how meaning and sound are connected.

Chapter 1, 'Prelude: Landmarks in the Landscape of Child Language' (Sage, 2010)

Using this extract as a starting point, analyse and evaluate the ways in which children acquire language up to the age of 24 months. [60]

Or,

4. Read the following extract from Language, Society and Power: An Introduction by Linda Thomas and Shan Wareing.

Of the many dialects of English, the dialect known as standard English has a special status. Standard English is the dialect of institutions such as government and the law; it is the dialect of literacy and education; it is the dialect taught as 'English' to foreign learners; and it is the dialect of the higher social classes. [It] achieved prominence historically, not on linguistic grounds, but on grounds of power and influence.

Chapter 10, 'The Standard English Debate' (Psychology Press, 1999)

Using this extract as a starting point, analyse and evaluate the ways in which some people see standard forms of language as having a higher status than non-standard forms. [60]
